

CMMC EXHIBITS OPEN

Dear Members and Friends:

The Chatham Marconi Maritime Center opened its doors to the public on August 1, 2010 with a ribbon cutting ceremony. As you know, we have been working towards this day for eight years and have many people to thank, especially you, our members, who have supported us over the years with your memberships and donations to the Capital Fund and the 2010 Annual Fund. Our opening could not have occurred without your help. Thank you!

The success of our opening has exceeded my expectations. Over 1,000 people visited the Center during the first two weeks we were open. Their response to our questionnaire has been overwhelmingly favorable. In my conversations with visitors I have heard: "very professional exhibit;" and "I have to leave now, but I'm coming back and bringing my friends" repeated many times over. If you haven't had a chance to visit the Center yet, I hope you will before we close for the season on September 5. Admission is free!

Again, thank you all for your support, and we look forward to welcoming you to preview the new CMMC Exhibition.

TWINS VISIT NEW CMMC EXHIBITION

Nancy Lyons brought her twin daughters to the August preview exhibition after seeing their picture on the CMMC advertising poster. Alyssa and Kaitlyn, who are entering the 3rd grade at Chatham Elementary School this year, listen to Lewis Masson explain the landmarks on the diorama of the Marconi/RCA Wireless Station where he worked for 35 years.

Since their dad, Marc, is First Engineer on the ship Maersk Wisconsin, the girls have a special interest in maritime communications. The twins and area students will have other opportunities to learn about wireless technology because CMMC is working with Cape Schools as they explore Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math programs in their new science curriculum.

Keep posted to the CMMC website and sign up for email notices of when The Chatham Marconi Maritime Center will open once again.
