This year the Marconi-RCA Wireless Museum celebrates the final of three consecutive centennials historically significant to both Cape Cod and America.

Dr. Moxon will share the story of this pivotal era in the history of communication that put Chatham at the forefront as "The World's Greatest Coastal Station." The introduction of maritime radio in Chatham 100 years ago is celebrated in our new exhibit: Chatham Maritime Radio - 1921.

Our Speaker: Edwin (Ed) Moxon is a retired electrical engineer who returned to the Cape in 2004 after a career in research and manufacturing. He holds a PhD from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in the field of communication and has a keen interest in the history of radio and of Chatham station WCC.

Ed joined Chatham Marconi in 2003, was elected a Director in 2005, and served as Board Secretary from 2007 to 2010. His research into wireless history and technology and his work on exhibits represent major contributions to the development and success of the Marconi-RCA Wireless Museum.
